OSHA DOCKET

Surely there are more important things for your branch of the government to do than ban smoking everywhere. Workplaces that cannot afford the proper ventilation is acceptable--my own office is non-smoking for that reason, but there is a comfortable place outside for all three or four who do smoke.

The key to the coconut is accommodation and certainly there should be no ban on smoking in bars, restaurants, hotels and motels, etc. In fact if such restrictions were implemented, neither I nor my husband would spend a dime in any of them.

And certainly if the restriction should include not smoking in one's own home, we certainly would make it clear at the outset that an appliance repair person or a plumber is warned at the outset that smoking is a part of our lives and anyone who objected to it could not do the job.

Sincerely,

Wini Edmunds
